Ginny,

Please see Erin's note regarding the V-wear lighter issues. I had asked her to provide me with detailed report of consumer comments for the past month and a half.

The report I received this morning is rather extensive (106 pages). However, it is easy to read. I'd be happy to make it available to you or anyone else who wants to take a look at it.

Bottom line is I think the only problem we may have is that our consumers may not know how to refill a lighter properly. In reading the comments I didn't see anything that was cause for alarm as most appear to be "consumer reported the lighter was defective or wouldn't ignite."

There were some consumers who claimed that they had refilled the lighters and that they still couldn't get them to light. I've forwarded the warranty instructions containing the manufacturer addresses to Site1.

A policy statement regarding returning the lighters to the manufacturer will be issued to Site1 shortly.

Let me know if anyone would like a copy of the more detailed report.
